The Scientific Discovery of the Age!

The Magic Key to the Mystery of Life!

From time immemorial it has been man's predominating ambition to prolong life. But among the many brilliant minds who have devoted their lives to the fascinating subject it was left to the immortal Darwin to give to the world, in his great theory of Life, the fundamental principle upon which to build all further research in this direction. Following closely in his footsteps came Prof. Dr. Ludwig Buechner, a German scientist of international renown, with his remarkable work entitled "Das Buch des Langen Lebens" (the book on Longevity). But alas, like Darwin, he too died ere he could reap the fruit of his wonderful doctrine. Others, however, equally great took up the interrupted thread, with the result that two famous German scientists, after years of experiments and research, have at last discovered the secret of Longevity, in the shape of a remarkable Vegetable Compound, which, if properly used, will positively prolong Life. This new remedy, appropriately named "Longavita"

(meaning Long Life) has been subjected to the most rigid tests at all the leading clinics and hospitals throughout Europe with marvelous results. Appreciating the importance of this discovery, we have acquired, at enormous cost, the exclusive proprietary right to this truly wonderful preparation, which has proved a blessing to mankind. "Longavita" is the true

Tablet of Life, a rejuvenator par excellence, embodying the veritable secret of Longevity in a practical, feasible form. It is the fountain of perpetual youth, which it prolongs far beyond its present limits, while retaining health in a perfectly normal state. "Longavita" brightens the eye, stimulates mental activity, gives elasticity to the step, makes the face full, absorbs wrinkles, cleanses the system, purifies the skin, and is the only true Ponce de Leon remedy for old and young of both sexes. Endorsed by Europe's leading physicians.

QUIET MEETING.

Very little enthusiasm was manifested at the adjourned town meeting on Monday evening and only 40 minutes was consumed in doing the business. Moderator Robinson was prompt in calling the meeting to order at 7.30. Upon a motion of Selectman Farmer articles 3, 5, 7, 8, 13 and 14 were taken up and article 6 taken from the table. $375 was appropriated for laying the fire alarm wires under ground on Pleasant street. Mr. W. A. Peirce motioned, under art. 6, that Miss A. M. Stevens, E. S. Farmer, G. Y. Wellington, W. A. Muller, Charles Gott, be made a committee of 5 for Patriot's day and $400 be raised in celebrating the same, and it was voted. It was voted to let the Cutter school committee use the unexpended balance for grading. Appropriations recommended by the Committee of 21 for filling in around the cemetery was carried. On motion of Mr. W. G. Peck it was voted to use the railway tax for highways. A motion made by Mr. Fessenden to allow the moderator, and chairman and secretary of the Committee of 21 to choose a new committee excepting 14 members, was carried. A parkway around the cemetery was voted. Oak street was renamed Hutchinson road. The motion to suppress common nuisances was voted. The Rev. J. M. Mulcahy had art. 10 taken up and then had the same laid on the table. On motion of Mr. W. W. Rawson the meeting adjourned at 8.10.

Master J. B. Bruke of Cambridge, the boy soprano, will sing at the Universalist church tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock. This will be a rare treat.

Mr. Robert H. Fall has severed his connection with the Boston Elevated as conductor. He is on his farm at Exeter, N. H., where he anticipates erecting a hotel. All wish his unlimited success.

Mrs. Charles R. Hoyt of 18 Water street, with her son Walter, and a lady friend, were present at a basket party Boston, Tuesday evening, given by Kenelworth Castle, Knights of the golden Eagle. They spent a most enjoyable evening.

The Arlington Homing club has just closed a very successful series of races for a handsome silver cup from Gardner, Mass., 50 miles. The inclemency of the weather during the past month has been unendurable, especially in regard to flying pigeons, as the club only had the pleasure of one good Sunday. The stipulations in the rules of the race were that each member should be compelled to win the cup twice in order to claim it as his own property. This gave all the members an equal chance for two flies, which made it very interesting and caused keen competition. The birds were liberated in Gardner last Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, and the first bird, which was owned by Mr. John D. Irwin, arrived in Arlington at 9.19.10. Mr. Irwin was heartily congratulated by the members on his successful fly. The order of arrivals was as follows: J. D. Irwin, 9.19.10; C. H. Rice, 9.20.10; J. L. Murray, 9.20.55; J. Holson, 9.25.10; A. Irwin, 9.26.9.

Arlington News.

Mr. Frederick Clements has for rental one-half of his double house at 14 Water street. It contains 7 rooms and has bathroom, set range, furnace, set tubs, and is one of the best rents in Arlington. It has been put in splendid condition. The price is reasonable.

Mr. W. H. N. Francis, who has in rehearsal "The Rivals," will render the play in the Town hall on the evenings of Dec. 19 and 20. Mr. Francis, in presenting this play to our public is sparing neither time nor hard work, so that there should be no failure on the part of our people to crowd the hall for these two evenings.

The schools will close on Tuesday afternoon for the remainder of Thanksgiving week. The teachers for the most part will enjoy their Thanksgiving dinner at their respective homes. We will remember with what delight we used to make straight from what was then the High street Grammar school to our New Hampshire turkey, plum pudding and pumpkin pie.

The Belmont Coal Co. will supply you with the best coal on the market at the lowest possible price. We are putting tons in Arlington with entire satisfaction. Tel. con. C. B. Sydam Manager.

THANKSGIVING DAY.
To us there is no holiday, or, better, holy day, in all the year so precious in its memories of the past as is Thanksgiving day, for it means everywhere, and especially here in New England, the homecoming of the absent children.
Thanksgiving day had its birth near Plymouth Rock when those comparatively few survivors of that terrible winter in our early history came together for devout thanks and praise that a sufficient number of those bravest of the brave had been spared to plant a nation after God's own liking.
This annual feast of the harvest time is a worthy tribute to the home life of our people. It must not be forgotten that it was the home that our forefathers sought when they set sail on angry seas, bidding adieu to the mother country.
They recognized from the beginning the worth of the individual man and woman.
They were determined from the start to be delivered from the intellectual and spiritual bondage which was to them worse than death; and so it was that with stout hearts they braved the treacherous waters at that most relentless season of the year. Who would not dare to die when all that makes life the richest gift that God bestows becomes impoverished by that dominating spirit which kills both soul and body? Our fathers "built better than they knew," and so to us in larger measure than they even hoped have come the home, the school and the church.
We place the home first, because it is the father and mother of us all. The family life is the first associated life recognized in all scriptural history.
It is from the home that we all date our reckoning. The memory of a loving father and mother is the precious legacy coming down to us from the generation preceding. Who of us at this season of the year does not recall in affectionate remembrance that dearest spot of all?
How delightful it is for us to bring to mind that New Hampshire home of ours, where we children were so numerous that could any of our modern fathers and mothers have looked in upon us at our midday meal they would have thought we were enjoying a Sunday school picnic. In those days the children were received with an open-arm welcome, and God sent them in goodly numbers. It is nothing other than a calamity that in our American life the boys and girls are growing less and less in number. That motherhood which has upon it and about it the stamp of divinity has now come to be regarded in too many instances as a deprivation of the pleasures and charms of life.
Why, it was only the other day that in making our way to Boston by the electric, we saw a woman with her little poodle dog in her lap, while her baby, if she has one, was undoubtedly being cared for by the servant at home.
It is high time for the American people to recognize the fact that there can be no real home without the children, and that these children should receive the first attention of their parents instead of being turned over to the servant. There is no higher ministry on all God's earth than that which we bestow upon the little ones. But we still have, thank God, homes where the music of the children's voices have been heard and are yet heard, and to these homes will the children turn their steps on Thursday of next week, the day set apart for our annual thanksgiving. The father and mother will look long and anxiously adown the way that they may catch the first sight of the approaching child so long absent from the loving embrace. To receive the benediction of the good old home is a whole gospel in itself. It is the renewal of one's vows of filial love and devotion. With the breath of the Thanksgiving time full upon us we are all born again. "We shall meet, but we shall miss him," is the minor chord, the sad refrain in this annual song of the year. "The vacant chair" will be there, yet the life that has gone out and up will be present in its sweet and sacred touch. "The vacant chair" here means the ascended life there, so that apart from us they are of us and with us still. Yes, the glad Thanksgiving time shall count us an unbroken number, whether here or there!

"JUDGE NOT."
"Judge not, that ye be not judged." is the scriptural text from which we heard the Rev. Mr. Fister, pastor of the Universalist church, preach an excellent sermon on Sunday morning. "Hear both sides before rendering a verdict" was the wise admonition of Mr. Fister.
The thought of the sermon was that we are to take in one's environments and whatever peculiar conditions may surround the one going wrong before we pass judgment, and then we are to invariably exercise the spirit of forgiveness. In support of this last statement, Mr. Fister cited that notable instance where Christ forgave the woman who was taken in the very act of adultery.

The entire sermon was a sensible exposition of the everlasting truth that we are not to judge lest we ourselves be judged. And yet how ready the most of us are to size up our neighbor. What little, mean things we say about him when we know little or nothing either of his surroundings or his motive. To be just and generous is the first of christian virtues.

TOMORROW'S SERVICES.
Tomorrow's services in the several churches of Arlington will be largely those of the annual Thanksgiving time.
This is a wise arrangement on the part of our clergymen, for on the special day set apart for Thanksgiving the people as a whole prefer spending the day at home instead of attending church.
Whether this is the better way or not, such is the fact; so that the Sunday previous to Thanksgiving day is really the only time in which all may unite in the public service of rendering thanks and praise for the blessings of the year.
Our churches should be well filled tomorrow, and we trust there will be a good audience present on Thursday of next week when all the Protestant churches will unite with the Universalist brethren in their house of worship.
The home service, however, should be the service of all others in which a true spirit of praise and thankfulness should express itself in acts of devotion and rejoicing. A united family must necessarily send forth songs of joy and praise.
When the parents and children come literally in touch with one another under the paternal roof then there must be a revival in all good things. The ministry of the home is of divine authority. We trust there will be no home in Arlington that shall on this occasion of the annual gathering fail to enter into the full spirit of the glad Thanksgiving time.

WHY GROWL ABOUT THE WEATHER?
And yet there is no one who growls about these disagreeable days of mist and rain and frightfully frequent changes from weather approximating zero to that of 60 degrees above, more than we do. It is so easy to vent one's spite on the weather! All this one can do without endangering his standing in the church or without losing or even lessening his position in society life. Everybody is accorded the right to declare with impatient voice that it is either too hot or too cold, or too dry or too wet, and so on to the end of the chapter.
We all desire more or less frequently to reside in some other latitude than that which marks our present habitation.
Seldom will you find one altogether suited with the climatic conditions surrounding him. Most men and women are eternally wanting something from the heavens above or from the earth beneath that they haven't got, and because they haven't got it is the chief reason why they so persistently think they want it. And so it goes—we are never satisfied. One declares that if he could only spend his winters in Florida he would be perfectly content; and yet when the frost in that land of the summer time is sufficient to kill the orange crop, then, shivering in homes ill fitted to withstand the cold, this same one wishes with all his heart that he was up north where homes are built snug and warm, and where the furnace fire is kept aglowing.

It was only the other day that we said to a friend that we would like to winter in Southern California, when he replied after this wise: "Why, I had a friend who spent last winter in Pasadena, California, and she complained most bitterly of the disagreeable chill of those evening in Southern California." So we are inclined to think after all that is said and done that possibly our northern climate is on the whole as life-giving and life-sustaining as is that of the sunnier lands of the south. At any rate, we have about made up our mind to do less growing about the weather and take the sun and the cloud, the heat and the cold, with all the good nature possible.
Why not, all of us, take things as they come?

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.
That Arlington Heights is an inspirational locality is shown in many ways, but in no way more positively than that the well-known Sam Walter Foss, the poet of nature, has written from the highest tip of the heights some of his best lines. Mr. Foss said to us the other evening that so frequently had he rode out from his home in Somerville to the heights that he might become imbued with his subject that he had come to call the heights his office. We mention this fact that we may impress our Arlington people with the truth, if such be needed, that our town is distinguished for its picturesque sites. Arlington Heights cannot easily be surpassed for situation. Those of you who have read Frank Bolles will remember how delightfully and enthusiastically he speaks of the heights. The object we have in view in writing this paragraph is that our town's people shall more frequently make their way to the heights, and so take in that widespread and varied scenery had from that part of Arlington.

CONDITIONS MUST BE RIGHT.
The conditions must be right if one is to work at his best, and this is especially true of all literary effort. One of our clergymen said to us on Wednesday that he found it quite impossible to write while such weather is on as we had during the first part of the week.

No one can shoot an idea straight for the mark while the days are muggy.
There must be ozone in the air or otherwise there will be no ozone in the brain.
A crisp, bright thought is born of a crisp, bright atmosphere. So in spite of our editorial, "Why growl about the weather?" we are this Wednesday morning a growler of the worst sort. Why doesn't Probabilities better manage the weather bureau? The department promised us colder weather for today, but the prophecy hasn't materialized.

HOW ABOUT YOUR PLUMBING?
The above should be the first question asked by every family in Arlington, and particularly should it be the leading query in the autumn time, before the cold weather sets in for good. During the warmer months of the year our houses are more or less open to the sunshine and the air, so that should there be a leak in the plumbing injurious effects might be escaped by the free circulation of air within the home. But in the winter time, with closed doors and double windows, the condition of things is entirely different. Then the atmosphere of the home becomes bottled up, and we must breathe it.

The plumbing of the house should be carefully examined every year, and particularly so in the home where there are children. We should never forget that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." There is a cause for every illness. Remove the cause and thus preserve the health of your family.
See to it that your plumbing is all right, and see to it now.

OPERATIC MUSIC IN CHURCH.
A correspondent in the Boston Evening Transcript complains of too much operatic music in church, and in all this we agree with the correspondent.
There can be no more reason for the solo or duet in the church than might be given why the clergyman should come out on the platform and speak a selected piece before preaching his sermon. We thus speak of the solo and duet, because the music generally selected for such is more or less operatic in its composition. Simple music and simple preaching are demanded in these days of the pulpit. Why not, in every instance, answer the demand?

BISHOP POTTER'S LETTER.
Bishop Potter's letter to Mayor Van Wyck of New York, published in the New York Tribune on Saturday last, reveals a deplorable condition of moral in that city. It is acknowledged by Crocker and Tammany that vice is rampant in New York, so much so that the Tammany chiefs have appointed a committee for reformatory work in the great city. Things must be desperately bad when you can start Tammany out in any line of reform work. But it is apparent that vice in many portions of New York city is getting the ascendancy, while virtue is held at a discount. What shall be done with the social evil is the great question, or should be, of the hour. The best of men and women have dodged this interrogative, falsely assuming that it was not in good taste to discuss so unclean a subject. The only way to reform is to recognize the need of reformation.

Unquestionably, the social evil will always exist to a greater or less extent so long as men and women are human beings. How shall we, then, modify and lessen the evil is the question propounded by Bishop Potter. The Rev.
Dr. Parkhurst a few years ago made vigorous war upon it, but he utterly failed to accomplish any substantial good, and this, too, after he came dangerously near compromising his standing as a minister. We believe that much will be done to lessen this evil, when its nefarious work shall not be made to contribute to either one of the great political parties. And again, when the law shall come to recognize the fact that the world will never entirely rid itself of this evil, then there will likely come that legislation which shall hold it in check and keep it at least within certain sanitary limits. The mistake the most of us make is that we are so unwilling to admit what are indisputable facts. Evil exists, and however much we may deny or dodge the truth of this statement, still the fact remains all the same. It is so difficult to get men and women to own up to the weaknesses of human nature! When that time comes, when each of us shall be willing to confess our need of help, then will come that reformation which reforms.

THOSE SEVEN LECTURES.
Those seven lectures now being given in Boston by Edward Howard Griggs, A.
M., of Brooklyn, upon the "Ethical interpretation of social progress," are begetting much interest. His lecture last Saturday upon Greek and christian ideals in modern civilization was the most interesting thus far of the course.
We enjoy not only what Mr. Griggs so well says, but we enjoy the way he says it. He is a man of liberal thought, and evidently anxious to learn from every available source. We were particularly interested in what he had to say of the relation of Greek and christian ideals.
He declared that the one was the complement of the other, and that both taken together were better and more complete than either alone. Mr. Griggs is a thinker, and this is just what the world most needs.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
To-day Harvard and Yale meet for the supreme struggle at New Haven.
May the best team win.

The Somerville Electric Co. evidently think Arlington "dead easy," judging from the way they have been giving service the past week. Oh, for a town plant!

One of the grandest welcomes a hero could have received was given President Kruger as he landed at Marseilles, France, on Thursday. He deserves all of the honor, for he is in the right.

Brig. Gen. Joseph Wheeler is a proud man today in being presented Thursday evening with a G. A. R. badge by E. W.
Kinsley post 113 of Boston. The world does move, and in the right way.

The last sad rites were held over the remains of the late Charles H. Hoyt yesterday at his home in Charlestown, N. H. Thus the greatest playwright ever known has joined the great majority.

It was our pleasure to meet Mr. Frederick Clements of Berlin, N. H. at the home of his mother, Mrs. Squires Clements, 12 Water street. Mr. Clements is a prosperous business man of Berlin and a prominent member of the Common council. Mr. Clements possesses all the qualites of a grand and noble nature and we found him fully alive to all the leading issues of the day.

We hope for every Arlington home a joyous Thanksgiving day.

Food sale at the vestry of the Universalist church this afternoon.

The Congregational church Home Missionary fair netted the society $650.

The services tomorrow at the Universalist church will be in keeping with the Thanksgiving season.

Do not forget to remember the poor during Thanksgiving week. "The poor ye have always with you."

Division 43, A. O. H., will hold its annual Thanksgiving ball in the Town hall on Thanksgiving eve.

Rev. S. C. Bushnell left yesterday for New Haven, Conn., to witness the football game of Harvard and Yale.

Mr. William Walshe is to lecture in the Town hall tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Sheildan Guards.

Mrs. E. Nelson Blake is still in very poor health. She has the best wishes of her friends for a change for the better soon.

One of our readers asks: "Who is the author of 'Love me, love my dog'?" John Heywood is the author of the above bit of wisdom.

Mr. Charles A. Cushing of the heights will tell the Arlington Board of Trade on Tuesday evening of his trip to Nome. The merchants of the town are especially invited to be present.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Baptist church will meet in the Grand Army hall, Sunday evening, at 6.30. Subject, "What intemperance costs our nation." Miss Lena Perigo will be the leader.

The new Broadway line was opened yesterday, the first car reached Arlington at 3.30 p. m. and all the school children were given a free ride. The road was opened for business this morning.

The Sunshine club of the Heights met with Mrs Kimball, at her home on Central street on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. A most enjoyable time was had by all present.

It is hoped that in the near future Mr. Sam Walter Foss will be secured for an evening's reading before the Arlington board of trade at some meeting of the board to which the public will be invited.

The Arlington house has become distinguished under its present proprietor, Mr. J. C. Rauch, for the neat and inviting manner in which it is kept. His well-laden tables never fail to tempt the appetite.

If you wish a turkey you can depend upon for Thanksgiving, go to J. O. Holt on Pleasant street. He has some fine ones at a fair price. He will furnish you with a full dinner from his grocery and provision store.

Mr. Alexander Beaton, the contractor and builder, 49 Park avenue, Arlington Heights, who has had a busy summer is still busy. Mr. Beaton is familiar with the latest in architecture. His work always stands the test.

Keep in mind Tuesday evening, Dec. 4, and come to the Universalist church and hear the "Not-a man" trio, Bertha Agnes Lloyd, violinist, interspersed between the beautiful Gibson tableaux, with cooling refreshments later on.

The union Thanksgiving service will be held at the Universalist church this year at 11 a. m. Rev. John G. Taylor of the heights will preach the sermon, and the other ministers of the town will be present and assist in the service.

Mrs. Edward Kelly of Bacon street has recently received four empty cartridge shells from her brother, who is a soldier in the Philippines, after he had killed four Filipinos with the cartridges, among which four was a major.

The executive committee of the local Christian Endeavor union have plans well under way for a joint social in the Congregational church next month. A prominent speaker on Christian Endeavor work, has been engaged for an address. Other particulars next week.

There will be a meeting of the Arlington Improvement association in Odd Fellows' hall on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The Hon. James A. Bailey, Jr., chairman of the Metropolitan Sewerage commission, will address the association on the system of disposing of sewerage.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Skillings, corner Mass. avenue and Academy street, is recovering from her recent severe illness. A call at her home on Wednesday found her much improved. Mrs. Skillings is always interested in the current events of the day, and especially is she interested in all literary work.

On Wednesday evening 30 members of Post 36 and 6 members of Post 119, of Lexington, paid a fraternal visit to Post 2 of South Boston. The orchestra of Post 36 gave one of their entertaining programs. There were addresses and a collation. A special car conveyed the company to and from South Boston and a jolly company it was.

The services at St. Agnes' church last Sunday afternoon were of an especially interesting character, the occasion being the confirmation of a class of 150. The ceremonies were conducted by Rt. Rev. John Brady, auxiliary bishop of Boston, assisted by Rev. N. J. Murphy of St. Joseph's church of Belmont and Rev. A. S. Malone of St. Agnes' church.

School Supt. Sutcliffe has hardly been a wanderer for the past week or more while his little daughter, Barbara, has been ill with diphtheria. For meanwhile several homes have been open to him in Arlington. Yet that he might make assurance doubly sure, he has made his stay in Boston until within a day or two. We are glad to report that his little girl is well over with her illness. Mr. Sutcliffe is constantly evincing the greatest care for the health of his pupils. We'll venture that he will be overjoyed to be once more in his own home and with his own household gods.

Mr. Garrett J. Cody of the police force did a brave act in saving Mr. Wm H. Berry and family of Somerville on Monday in staying their runaway horse in its mad flight through the center of the town. Mr. Cody stopped the runaway at much personal risk. He fortunately escaped with a few scratches and bruises. Mr. Berry and his family were but slightly injured.

Mr. Winthrop Pattee, of the office of Mr. Henry W. Savage, reports that papers have just passed conveying the property at 84 and 86 Bartlett avenue, Arlington, to Susan S. J. Morrill, trustee, the grantor being Maude L. Downing. The property consists of a nearly new double house, having all the modern conveniences. The lot of land contains 8750 square feet. The assessed value of the property is $5900, the selling price being considerably in excess of the assessment. The purchaser buys for investment.

The Crescent associates of the lower end of the town held their 14th monthly supper last Saturday evening. Amidst a host of invited friends they sat down to an excellent collation, served by the members of the club. A brief address was given by the president, and attention was called to the solid financial standing of the club. After the tables were cleared away an enjoyable entertainment was furnished by a few of the members, and their efforts were enthusiastically recalled, each being repeatedly recalled. The program:

Violin solos, Frank J. Duff Harmonica solos, Emil Hackel
Buck and wing dancing,
William Ivester and Stanley Llewellyn Impersonating, John Ivester
Popular songs, J. Ernest Bertwell Dumb-bell exercise, Chas. L. Bertwell Punching-bag exhibition, Our President Indian club exhibition, Our President

We were a good deal interested in our call the other morning at Messrs. Marshall & Grant's studio. As artists, this well-known firm ranks among the very first of the profession. Their old miniature style of picture, which, by the way, is the new style reproducing the old, is well high perfected art. One on entering the studio is attracted by the unique picture of the Arlington young man to be seen at the door. Its entire expression comes near to life. And then that Lexington young lady hanging alongside is richly deserving the first prize. In the studio we saw many heads of our Arlington people in the new school platinums, and while we give great credit to Messrs. Marshall & Grant in reproducing those familiar faces, yet we must insist that Arlington has a generous number of taking faces for the artist. The pictures are perfect in every respect, and one can easily see that Messrs. Marshall & Grant's work is their best advertisement.

Gentlemen's night at the Unitarian Social alliance on Wednesday evening proved an occasion of unusual interest. There were nearly 100 present to enjoy the hour. A reception was held from 6.30 until 7.30. The reception committee were Mrs. Dennett, president of the alliance, Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Brackett. Supper was served by Caterer Hardy. The tables were decorated with choice flowers, while the platform was made attractive with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. After the supper came the speaking and music. Piano solo by Miss Proctor, then Mrs. James A. Beasley from Roxbury Highlands discussed in a pleasant and instructive way the work of the alliance. Next came a piano solo by Mrs. S. B. Wood, followed by an especially interesting address by Mr. Samuel A. Eliot on the work of the association in the south. Dr. Eliot has recently visited Richmond, Chattanooga, Atlanta, Charleston and other important places in the south in the interest of the Unitarian denomination. Mrs. Dr. Hooker gave enjoyable readings. The closing address was made by the Rev. Mr. Gill. The meeting was one of the most successful yet held by the alliance.

Announcements concerning the First Parish (Unitarian) church for tomorrow: At the morning service the yearly Thanksgiving collection for parish charity will be taken up. The Sunday school will also make its usual contribution of provisions for the poor of Boston. At 7 p. m. sharp, the monthly evening service will be held. Rev. Frederic Gill will preach at both services, in the evening giving a lecture sermon on James Lane Allen's latest novel, "The reign of law." To all the services the public are cordially invited. The musical program for the evening will include organ prelude, "Marcia religiosa," H. W. Parker; duet, "Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous," Schnecker, Mrs. Colman and Mr. Grosbeck; soprano solo, "Dream of Paradise," Gray, Mrs. Annie Wing Smith; anthem, "Te Deum in B minor," Dudley Buck; response, "God is a spirit," Bennett; organ postlude, "Postlude in C," W. A. Lewis. The quartette comprises those named above, and Mr. Chas. E. Fitz, tenor. Mr. J. P. Weston, organist and director.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH NOTES.

Friday, Nov. 30, St. Andrew's day.

Sunday, Nov. 25, Sunday next before Advent.

Monthly lecture on church history before the Girls' Friendly society, by the rector, on Wednesday evening next.

St. John's Young Men's society will hold its weekly meeting at 8 p. m. on Tuesday, which will be "Musical evening." Each member is to contribute a musical number to the program, or to bring a friend who will do so.

The Thanksgiving service of the Episcopal church, as appointed in the book of common prayer, will be held on Thursday morning at ten o'clock. The minister and congregation will afterwards join in the union service.

We understand that the tickets for the entertainment at the Town hall this evening have sold well. Many young people will take part in the Gibson pictures tableaux. Nutter's orchestra will play. Dancing from 9 o'clock.

The Rev. Father Field of St. John the Evangelist, Boston, gave a lecture before St. John's Young Men's society on Tuesday evening last. The subject was "Ups and downs in a mission-preacher's life." The Parish house was filled, and the interesting address was listened to with much attention.

The Rev. James Yeames will preach a special Thanksgiving sermon in St. John's church tomorrow morning. In the evening he will deliver the fourth in the series of lectures on the ten commandments, "Service, or the fourth commandment." Morning prayer, ante-communion and sermon at 10.30; evening song and sermon at 7.30; Sunday school and Bible classes for young men and women at 12.10.

It is not life alone that they prolong. But while you live they keep you healthy, strong.

"Longavita" Tablets will restore the dimples in your cheeks, the wan look vanishes, the wrinkles telling of approaching age or sorrows past will be removed, and life toned up to make it worth the living. It is a purely vegetable compound, a preparation which represents the culmination of years of labor and scientific research of two noted German scientists. The effect of these tablets upon the human system is marvelous by their certainty of action, and the immediately beneficial results from their use. At last a mystery has been cleared and a baffling problem solved. Our advertisement in another column will interest you.

Thirty teachers and 30 pupils will attend the inauguration of President McKinley in Washington, March 4, 1901, as guests of the Boston Globe. They will travel in parlor cars, tarry at first-class hotels, and see all the sights of the capital city, Philadelphia and New York. The trip will last a week. The Globe will pay all the bills, including the salaries of the teachers substitutes in school. The teachers will be chosen by ballot by the readers of The Globe. The ballot will be found henceforth on the second page of The Daily Globe and on the second page of the colored supplement of The Sunday Globe. The successful teachers, 6 from Boston, 6 from Massachusetts outside of Boston, 6 from Maine, 6 from New Hampshire and 6 from the remaining New England States, will each select the pupil, boy or girl, who secured for her the most votes, to accompany her to Washington. Thirty other boys and girls who are the next best vote-getters, as certified by their instructors, will each receive a $20 gold piece as a souvenir of the contest. The Globe conducted a like grand tour to the inauguration ceremonies of four years ago which proved so satisfactory to all concerned that it is to be repeated in 1901. Vote early and often.

CORREI AND MARSH.

While walking through the woods you are often startled by a sudden whirr-r-r-r as the ruffed grouse, incorrectly called the partridge, takes flight from a thicket. Have you ever watched this noble game bird when he is unaware of your inspection? Hearing a flutter of wings among the scrub oak I conceal myself behind a rock and in a moment my caution is repaid by the sight of a ruffed grouse alighting close by. How handsome he is as he struts about, until flying to a fallen log he looks like a forest king in his proud security. Presently he begins to eat the sumac and partridge berries and then pecks at an acorn of the white oak. Besides these, he fares on the bright red berries of the black alder and on bog cranberries. During April and May the ruffed grouse build their nest at the foot of a tree. It is made of a few wisps of dried grass, dead leaves, and pine needles. The eggs, ten or fifteen in number, are a rich buff color. Every effort is made to mislead an intruder. The bird makes off with an apparently broken wing, or keeps perfectly still on the nest hoping to remain unobserved. Her foes are the fox, hawk, owl, and squirrel who is exceeding fond of grouse eggs. When surrounded by her brood the mother on the least alarm, gives the signal for the covey to scatter and when the danger is over a cluck unites the family once more.

In the stubble field and pasture the Bob White allures the sportsman under the name of quail; though the latter bird like the partridge is an inhabitant of England, and quite different from his supposed representatives here. Before the ice is unlocked in our brooks by warm rains or winters white mantel withdrawn from northern slopes the Bob Whites whistle is heard, the trumpet note of spring awaking Nature's subjects. Along the roadside you hear the song which the New Englanders translate into, "no more wet, more wet!" and how innocently it is repeated to your call. During may a simple nest is made from leaves and grasses for the brilliant white eggs sometimes a score in number. But it is a mistake to think that one may be harmlessly removed, for if the eggs are handled when first laid, the mother deserts and leaves them to be eaten by the blue jay or a prowling weasel. The mowing machine makes sad havoc among a flock of young Bob Whites, the annual winter storms and dry seasons kill off great numbers; but most fatal of all are the depredations of the game hog who sends dozens upon dozens to our markets. A flock, startled, fly off and up into the trees, keeping out of sight until the intruder disappears, then at intervals, the signal to reassemble is heard. At night they form a circle with heads pointing out and one of their number remains sentinel for the rest.

Woodland ponds and meadows and at times the ocean are the haunts of the black duck and several times unsuspected I have been able to watch them in their secluded homes. Upon close examination this bird is not black but a dark brown so that dusky brown so that dusky duck is a more correct appellation than black duck. One day in August while walking along the shore of a meadow I heard a low quack some thirty yards in front of me and getting down on my hands and knees began to creep through some button bushes and reeds until at length upon peering through an open place, was rewarded by the sight of a score of dusky ducks sporting in the water. They were feeding on duckweed a water plant, and although the ducks could not see me were on the alert seeming very shy and wary. In the spring when the ducks fly north just before the breeding season they are shot in great numbers mostly at night when they are resting on the water. The nests are not made until April but in states like Maine and Connecticut when the shooting season is from September first to May first, the young ducks are cruelly shot when only half grown. A flock of dusky ducks cleaving the sky in a wedged shaped battalion is as pretty a sight as the wild geese. Upon the least alarm, the whole flock with a loud "quack! quack!" rise into a loftier flight and soon disappear over the hills.

When making your way carefully on spongy ground you are sometimes startled by seeing a bird fly up from the reeds. With a rasping "quawk, quawk" he spreads his wings and flaps slowly into the marsh soon alighting on a dead branch or log. This inhabitant of wild swamplands is the black-crowned night heron. He is hated by our smaller birds. Once I watched a night heron flying near a redwinged blackbird's nest. The mother bird uttered an alarm and out from a swamp blueberry thicket flew six redwings who attacked the enemy pecking at his eyes and neck until he flew away with the birds still after him. Thus different birds help one another in case of need. The heron's nest is made in a swamp maple or any other tree near the marsh; although sometimes found on the ground the eggs are pale blue. The great blue heron also may be seen near the haunt of his brother. He stands nearly four ft. high. Watching him from a boat, standing motionless in the water, you are apt to think what a dormant bird, but presently with a thrust his bill goes under water, and reappears with an unlucky frog or fish that had come within range.

The heron gives his prey a knock or two and then swallows it, head downward after which the motionless waiting and again interrupted until his appetite is appeased. The plumage of the wood duck surpasses that of any other. Swimming in a woodland pool he looks like a floating gem. And the musical "oo-eek," of the flocks winging their way low over the meadow, delights the ear. But no charm softens the heart of the sportsman like Peter Bell, he is impervious to nature's beauty and all his wanderings, have but one object game. The mother bird lays her eggs in the hole of a tree, and like the elder duck of the far north, covers them with the down from her breast. The eggs are twelve or more in number, and are oval and in color look like old ivory polished. After the young are hatched the mother takes them one by one in her bill and flies to the base of the tree, until all are safely deposited; but if the tree is over the little birds will drop down into it, and swim around at once a perfectly happy family. The brood is easily tamed and by the aid of corn, can be lured to the farmyard and domesticated.

Saw Too Much.
A farmer hired a man and put him into his field to work. After awhile the farmer came along and accosted the new hand:
"Did you see a carriage go down the road awhile ago?"
"Yes, I did. One of the horses was a gray boss, and the other was a roan and lame in his off leg."
"I thought I heard some men shooting over there on the edge of the woods."
"Yes; one of them was Colonel Jones. He was the tall one. The second one was Major Peters, and the third one was Tom McSniffer. Colonel Jones had one of them newfangled breech-loading guns what breaks in two."
"Did you see those wild pigeons fly over just now?"
"See 'em? Rather. There was 19 of them. They lit in that old cornfield down yonder."
"Well, you see too much for a man that is hired by the day. Here's your wages. When I want a man to keep watch of what is going on, I'll send for you."—London Answers.

The managing editor was haunted by the fear that some day this closet would set the building on fire. To relieve his mind the office boy, after much laborious thought, evolved the following sign and pasted it up on the door: "In case of fire put it out."—New York Mail and Express.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS.

A joyous Thanksgiving to our heights readers.

The Sunshine club met at Mrs. Kimball's on Central street, at the center, Wednesday afternoon, and passed a very pleasant afternoon.

Mr. C. H. Kimball was the caterer at the dance of the Follen Lend-a-Hand society at E. Lexington Tuesday evening, and gave entire satisfaction.

It is all right for young people to do their courting in the parlor but when they resort to street corners daily, it is carrying things too far. Many girls in this way are led astray.

The Lexington & Boston R. R. have at last decided to build a waiting room at the terminal of their road, certainly a great convenience to their patrons. Mr. George W. Kenty is to build the same.

The services tomorrow morning at the Congregational church will be at 10.30, Sunday school immediately after. The young people's meeting will be as usual in the evening. A cordial welcome is extended by Rev. Mr. Taylor to all.

We understand the reason for the delay in commencing operations in constructing the new car house of the B. E. R. R. is owing to a dispute with the B. & M. concerning the boundary line of the land the former purchased of Mr. Eaton.

Dr. R. Howard Meikle has opened an office at the corner of Mass. and Park avenues. Dr. Meikle is a graduate of Tomorrow the services at the Baptist church, corner of Park and Westminster avenues will be as follows: Preaching at 10.45 a. m., Sunday school at 12 m., evening service at 7. Friday evening prayer meeting at 7.45. Rev. A. W. Lorimer pastor; residence, 144 Forest street.

The height's people have been groping about in the dark the past week with first the arc and then the incandescent failing to give light. The town receives an insignificant rebate, the taxpayers none. The result is the town is a partial loser, the tax payers entire losers, and the electric light company the gainer. Truly a pretty state of affairs.

The work on the house of Hose 1 is completed and makes a decided improvement. John, the faithful old fire-horse, now at the center, is to be placed in the new stall and run with Charlie, thus making a two-horse hitch. This change the engineers have tried to make for two years but had not sufficient appropriation money. The heights will now be well equipped.

For nearly fifteen hours this week the residents of Crescent hill were deprived of water owing to a connection being made. No notice, so far as we could learn, was given whereby an extra supply could have been drawn. Kitchen fires where hot water boilers were used could not be used. We can assure the citizens the commissioners are blameless, but the superintendent is not. Repairs excusable but an I-dont-care spirit from a public servant is not, and the sooner they are deposed the better. It's coming.

A large and appreciative audience assembled in Crescent hall on Thursday to witness the entertainment given by the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church, for the benefit of the organ fund. Every seat was occupied, and every available inch of standing room was taken up. The entertainment provided was a "Husking bee," in which the young people of the church took part, and was preceded by a piano solo, and a reading by Mrs. Coolidge. The piano solo was finely rendered. Mrs. Coolidge's first reading entitled "The Ruggles' Family Dinner Party," was most enthusiastically received by the audience and in response she gave a humorous selection entitled "Tommy."

Mrs. Coolidge is a reader of marked ability and holds the close attention of her audience throughout her readings. The stage was arranged to represent the interior of a barn, with a hay loft in one corner, while scattered about the floor were piles of corn for the husking. Those taking part in the "Husking Bee," made their appearance upon the stage singing "Jingle bells," and they were most cordially welcomed to the husking by the host and hostess, uncle Nathan Peterkin and Aunt Peggy his wife, impersonated by William Hadley and Florence Gardiner. Mr. Hadley made a most charming old man and acted his part to perfection, while Miss Gardiner dressed and acted the part of a most delightful old lady. All the characters were excellent. No little amusement was manifest when Little Lord Fauntleroy, at least six ft. tall, made his appearance in company with Algernon Fitznoodle, a dude from Boston. These characters were impersonated by Will Records and Chas. Sloan, and their costumes and make up were perfect, and their acting was one of the best features of the evening. Miss Josephine Learned as Betsey, the old maid was especially good and the solos which she so sweetly sang were a delight to the audience. Miss Learned's costume and make up was one of the best on the stage and her matrimonial designs on the Josiah, a nervous old bachelor, were most amusing. The husking was interspersed with songs and ended with a dance in which all took part. A new musical instrument was introduced called the humanophone which was similar to a song sheet with human faces for notes. The young people will add a considerable sum to the organ fund.

Last Wednesday Mrs. Mary Ellis who resides at Harwich center, came to the heights to make her sisters, Mrs. John Glover and Miss Birge of 1271 Mass. avenue a visit, expecting to have a pleasant time, but evidently fate had destined otherwise, for she complained the next day of a hard pain in her side which steadily increased and so alarmed her sisters that they went to Derby's drug store for something to bathe the same. Columbian spirits was purchased and Mr. Derby warned them not to use it internally. The spirits failed to ease the pain. Her sisters were horrified later in the day to find she had drunk the spirits and was in intense agony. The physician was sent for but she was past medical aid and died. Medical Examiner Swan was notified and he made his announcement that Mrs. Ellis had come to her death by drinking wood alcohol. There is not the least doubt but that Mrs. Ellis was temporarily insane. The husband was sent for and he came to Arlington. The funeral was held at Mrs. Glover's home and the remains were taken to her late home for interment. Mr. and Mrs. were married in July so that it makes it all the more sad.

Say! gentlemen at the center, we have an improvement association at the heights and consider it an outrage the way you are treating it on Patriot's day celebration.

EAST LEXINGTON.

Mr. James H. Phillips is laid up with neuralgia.

Mr. C. P. Nunn is having his house painted by the Bailey Brothers.

The Follen Sunday school is rapidly increasing, showing a gain of 25 members.

Mr. Charles Brown started on his 33d annual trip for the south the early part of the week.

Mr. Peter Harrington, who has been taking a home rest for a few weeks, has entered the milk business in Brighton.

While in Boston Thursday Miss Laura Bridgman lost her pocket book containing $15. We hope she may recover it.

At the morning service of the Follen Unitarian church the pastor, Rev. L. D. Cochrane, will speak on "Reverence."

Miss Alice G. Locke is attending the State Normal Art school of Boston. Specimens of her work show fine talent.

Mrs. H. L. Alderman will give a luncheon to the Whist club, at her home on Mass. avenue, on next Monday, Nov. 26.

The number of sleighs undergoing repairs in Mr. Byron Russell's shop forcibly reminds us of the proximity of winter.

Rev. L. B. McDonald of Concord will speak tomorrow evening at the second vesper service in the Follen Unitarian church.

Miss M. Louise Spencer was among those of the villagers who attended a coffee party in Bedford last Tuesday evening.

Mr. Edwin A. Osgood has put in a new furnace in his house on Mass. avenue, and is going to live his winters in our village.

Mr. James H. Phillips is going to give a graphophone concert to the members of the Chemical company at their next regular meeting of Dec. 3.

Miss Gertrude Ball is expected home on next Sunday, after a prolonged visit at Stonehurst, Woburn, the beautiful home of Mrs. John I. Monroe.

Mr. W. H. Steeve's barber shop, over the post-office, is a busy place on Saturday evenings. He is an up-to-date barber and deserves the patronage of our citizens.

We are glad to see that Mr. R. W. Holbrook has recovered from his attack of rheumatism and is again busy with his books in the office of the "brick store."

We made a very pleasant call on Mr. Irving Locke last Thursday evening. Mr. Locke is a comparatively young man, but the oldest brick mason in the village.

We have great sympathy for the over-sensitive people who keep their hearts in a continual state of turmoil by ever conjuring up chimerical imaginations that exist only in their own fanciful minds.

The Baptist society will hold their regular Sunday evening service in the Cary public library building tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock. Sermon by Mr. C. D. Easton. All are invited.

The people of the village would like to have the town remove the unsightly frame erected at the junction of Pleasant street and Mass. avenue for pumping water, especially as it is no longer needed.

Last Monday morning, while Mr. Andrew Mattson was at the post-office receiving his mail a sneak thief got into his room in the barn of Mr. Joseph Van Ness and carried off about $30 worth in clothes and money.

What are you going to do towards saving the little birds from the city sportsman? Couldn't the owners of land put up "no trespass" signs and enforce the law? Something must and will be done soon, or our song birds will be as scarce as our game birds.

The holiday season is a good time to advertise. If you intend to have some nicely executed business cards, bill-headers, statements, letterheads, circulars, or booklets printed, send your order to the Enterprise office. Your interests are ours and we will guarantee satisfaction.

Mr. Ernest E. Fuller of Pleasant street has been awarded the contract of grading the new greenhouses built by J. D. Spencer of Waltham street. He also has an application in for membership in the fire department, endorsed by some of the leading citizens of the village.

Some days ago we saw three robins while driving along Pleasant street, and the other morning we saw one at Arlington Heights, within a few rods of "The Oaks," the beautiful residence of Mr. Nixon Waterman. We wondered if he was hanging around to pick up a few new notes from Mr. Waterman.

On Thursday, Nov. 15, Mr. Joseph Dane was severely bitten by a dog belonging to Mr. Durant of East street. Mr. Dane was driving some cattle, and a few of them ran into Mr. Durant's yard. On attempting to drive them out the dog fastened his teeth in his leg, just above the knee.

Last evening, a little before 8 o'clock, an electric car on its downward trip ran into one of the Lexington Lumber Co.'s teams, loaded with lumber, lifting it off the track and landing it on its side, with the two off wheels dangling in the air, half-ways across the street, a short distance above Bryant's corner.

The High school girls played a basketball game Thursday afternoon in Hancock hall, the seniors beating the juniors 17 to 5. The village people are much interested in these game as Miss Corrine Locke, Miss Myra Fairbanks and Miss Anna Hamblen play with the seniors and Miss Essie Cook with the juniors.

A delegation from the Lexington Conclave Improved Order Heptasophs paid a visit to the Waltham Conclave at Waltham on last Wednesday evening, and among them were the following officers of the Lexington Conclave: Mr. C. Hatch, P. A.; Mr. O. K. Burnham, secretary; Mr. H. Malcolm Torrey, W. M.; Mr. C. Le Franks, O. These fraternal visits are becoming very popular among the different conclaves of the I. O. H.

On last Sunday afternoon one of the Lexington & Boston Street Railway Co.'s electric cars ran over a foxhound, belonging to Mr. Vossalik of Arlington Heights, within 40 feet of their stopping post at the Lexington inn, East Lexington. The car went on its way, leaving the mangled carcass of the dog lying beside the track until the owner removed it sometime later in the afternoon.

Mr. Arthur Thevigea, who lives near the R. R. depot on Mass. avenue, has, during the past week, put on all the appearances that a man is supposed to possess who has fallen heir to a large fortune. Upon inquiry, we found that this important looking air of proprietorship was induced by the appearance of a new baby girl at his home on last Friday morning, Nov. 16, that tipped the scales at 11 pounds. Both Mrs. Thevigea and the baby are doing nicely, and we tender them our sincerest congratulations.

We shall always hold in grateful remembrance those few subscribers who turned over their dollars without question or examination of any kind. We somehow can't feel quite so grateful towards those careful financiers who ask $1.50's worth of uncomfortable questions before they pay a dollar for 52 copies of this bright little paper which is surely worth 5c. a copy. However, we still remain willing to answer any and all questions if you'll pass over your coin immediately after you get through asking.

Although a resident of East Lexington for a number of years, we have lived and worked somewhat apart from the people of this village, and our sudden advent among them, in the public capacity of news-gatherer, has very pleasantly surprised our most sanguine expectations. Not only have they reached out to us the right hand of fellowship in the most earnest and welcome manner, but have also encouraged us by kind words, and subscriptions enough to the Enterprise to convince us that our mission among them is already an assured success.

The Junior Alliance put up a strong program at the entertainment which was given by them in Emmerson hall immediately after their supper Thursday evening. The supper alone was worth more than the small admission fee, and we feel rather proud to live in a village that can boast of the talent that participated in the entertainment which was so deservedly well patronized. Mr. George Foster was chairman and Miss Anna Lawrence pianist. The following program was finely rendered:

Duet, "Piff, Paff," Miss Anna Lawrence and Miss Henrietta Locke; solo, "Summer Woods," Miss Abbie Fletcher; plantation song with banjo accompaniment, Mr. Frank Fletcher; piano solo, "An Autumn Fantasy," Mrs. Teel; reading, Miss Edna Locke; solo, "Dancing 'mid the shadows," Miss Corrine Locke; solo, Mr. Frank Fletcher.

The sheet and pillow case dance of the Follen Lend-a-Hand society was held in the village hall Tuesday evening and was a very successful affair, being ably managed by Miss Flora Wright, who is vice-president of the society. The grand march was led by Mr. Ivers Wetherbee and Miss Flora Wright. Doane's orchestra of Arlington Heights furnished the music. Caterer Kimball of Arlington Heights had charge of the refreshments. Everybody present enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent, and there was such a feeling of satisfaction displayed that we expect to hear of another being run by the same society in the near future. Among those present were Rev. L. D. Cochrane, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Teel, Mr. and Mrs. Snelling, Mrs. Willard Pierce, Mrs. Bradford Smith, Mrs. Whitman, Mrs. Reading, Mrs. M. A. Pero, Mrs. Frank, Messrs. Ivers Wetherbee, Oscar Teel, Thomas Whiting, Fred Larkham, Charles Douglas, Clarence Wetherbee, Willie Sanderson, Walter Blanchard, Walter Fuller, Howard Hawkins, Chester Lawrence, David Smith, Clifford Peirce, Roy Jackson, Frank Fletcher, Carl Worthen, Sumner Blanchard, Quincy Blanchard, Homer Butterfield, Masters Wallace Teel, James Brown; Misses Laura Brigham, Mildred Caldwell, Millie Teel, Olive Teel, M. Louise Gray, May Sanderson, Grace Leavitt, Carrie Fiske, Lottie Sanderson, Bessie Sanderson, Addie Allen, Beulah Locke, Miss Annie Lawrence, Florence and Pannie Kauffman. Eleanor Worthen, Sadie Austin, Maria Cosgrove, Edith Reynolds, Daisy Frost, Abbie Fletcher, May, Lillian and Maud Snelling, Henrietta Locke. There were many from out of town whose names we could not ascertain.

"Is Truth Stranger Than Fiction?"

"Weary hearted, a sadder and wiser woman, she made her way over to John's house. The butler admitted her, and learning her name, he stopped and gazed at her in a frightened way. Instead of retiring to inform his master who the visitor was, he went over to an old cabinet in the corner and procured a package from one of the top drawers. He handed this to her and stood submissively by and looked on. She gazed at the little bundle so nicely done up and sealed and marked 'For Annie.' She gazed at the faded ribbon on the outside. It was an old one, covered with tear-stains. It was the kind young girls wore when we were young. Gently she raised the packet to her lips and kissed it again and again, and her hot tears fell upon it and mingled with his, already dry.

"Seeing the butler she asked in a pleading voice, 'Can't I see him?'

"But he only shook his head. 'Master said you might return someday, and he instructed me to give you the packet. If he was still alive we were not to call him, and if he was dead we were to direct you to his grave and pointing out the vacant one alongside of his to tell you it was waiting for Annie.'

"Is that all?" she asked huskily.

"That is all; but let me add, dear lady, that was an awful blow to our dear master. It must have been an awful sad song, for he has never smiled since that night. I came into the library unexpectedly one day and saw him kiss and hug an old worn-out copy of the same song, and I really believe—"

"But the last few words were wasted—my lady had taken flight, and the butler found himself talking to space.

"Making her way to the cemetery, and locating Harding's lot, she dropped down on this very spot," and the old man indicated a grassy spot with his stick. "With feverish haste she undid the package, and did not hear the footsteps of Sexton Smith, who, upon seeing who the visitor was, kept a respectful distance, but also kept vigil for fear that she might desecrate the graves. The first thing she found was a small pocket handkerchief, with a little bit of lace around the borders. The next was a picture—a cabinet photo—of a young girl, a fair girl, with soft dreamy eyes and babe white skin. She gazed on these placid features, and wondered if she, a woman of the world, so cultured, so popular, so happy—so happy, she repeated, and sighed—if that could have been herself.

"She kissed the picture of this fair maid, and gave it a startled look. Had the lips become animated, or was it only a delusion? Had he—she dared not breathe his name—had he at last kissed life into that silent face, or was it but a dream? She laughed as she thought it over. 'Ah, no! 'tis past, 'tis but a fancy; these sentiments are for the good and holy, but not for me!'

"Turning to the package again, she searched for other tokens, but there was none. Two or three letters written in a girlish hand completed the list of old relics. She glanced over them hastily, and kissing each one quickly did up the little bundle again.

"With those fair white hands, unused to work, and glittering with diamond rings, she dug a hole in the earth. She dug deep, and throwing in the relics of bygone days, hastily covered them up. Kissing the hallowed ground, she turned and left it without looking back.

"The sexton was too kind to haul over her work—the last poor work of a broken love, and he left the place by another path.

"She never returned to these parts again, and I guess she never will. I heard years afterwards that she wanted to marry a great musician, one that she had loved for many years, but he only laughed at her. He told her that she had made one man miserable and unhappy and she might do so again.

"She still goes on attaining fame and glory, but I often wonder if she is really happy. It seems to me that such happiness must be only a delusion. The roses have left her cheeks, and her hair is tinged with gray, for old Father Time does not worship at beauty's shrine. Suitors have sought her hand; dukes have offered their crowns, but she heeds them not. The hardened heart has no feeling. Can snow become animated, or a statue give life?

"Jack Harding still lingers on, though he hourly prays for death. He keeps his vigil in the old house, but it will not be for long. I followed him in there once to speak with him, but when I saw his bended form kneeling before a chair on which stood a picture now nearly obliterated by time, tears and kisses—when I saw the bursting of the flood-gates and the dear old eyes imploringly raised to heaven in supplication for the wayward one who heaped torture on his soul—when I saw all this I had not the heart to disturb him.

"Those tears wrung from an aching heart, each one was worth its weight in gold. I felt as if my heart would melt away. I could not bear the strain, and as I could not share his sorrow I left him with his pain. Was ever sorrow greater than his? Did ever any one suffer as he did, and yet bear up so bravely? 'Tis love, they tell us, moves the world, but 'tis also love that makes life hell for some to live.

"A man's love is naught, they say; 'Tis woman's love that rules the day."

"But ah, my friends, remember, there are men of the manly kind in this cold world, and there are women base as sin. I am through. I have told you the story of a man's blighted love; it is different from the stories you read. But as truth is stranger than fiction, so is this dissimilar from other kinds.

"My friends, I am old and tired, and soon I'll cross in Charon's boat; but were he to give me back my life I'd rather go than experience those heart-aches again that I have felt for Jack. All the gold this world could produce would not tempt me to live his life, no, not for one day. When you return again to this city come back to this old spot; you will probably find a new grave, for I do not think our Jack can live much longer. Possibly you will find two. When death appears she may consent to lie in the narrow bed waiting for her by his side.

"Allow your tears to water the grave of the best man that ever lived, and drop one, for his sake, on the bed of his strangely-mated fate. I too will lie at rest in yonder grave. Cast one blossom on the hill, and think of me as one of the friends of him who never wished man ill."

The old man's predictions came true, too soon. They laid dear old Jack on the hillside green, in the grave made for his form. It waited long for the sufferer, but the reaper at last gathered him in.

God in his great goodness knows our ways, and through them works his ends. He places some on this earth for joy and some as examples for men. He was an example, poor old Jack, and for his sake I've shed a tear on her grave too beside him.

Go seek the grave in Elmwood's grasses, and to it bend your knee, remembering that in this doing you pay a homage to him who lived and loved and suffered as few have done before. Cast one kind look at the last abode and shed one tear, no more.

How to Capture a Coon. There are several expert coon hunters in this city, probably five or six, and there are 64,792 people who would not know how to get a coon if they were lying around in every tree in the woods. Perhaps an old coon hunter's directions for getting one of the beasts may be interesting:

"First ye git a good dog. Then ye git a crowd of fellaers, and each feller gets a lantern and a gun loaded with buckshot. On the darkest night ye kin find go out in the wuss piece of woods ye know of. Turn yer dog loose.

"Then run as ye never run before and try ter foller yer dog. Ye can't do it, but ye kin try. Bimeby ye'll hear yer dog bay'n like tarnation up against some tree. If ye run all night and don't hear no bay'n, then ye hain't got no coon. Git under the tree where yer dog is and build a big fire outer brush wood. This'll let ye see the coon when he comes down.

"Then pick out the feller ye hate the wurst and make him climb. Bimeby the coon'll jump. When he hits ground, all hands go fer him. When ye've got him, then try ter find yer way home. Ye can't do it, but ye kin try. Ye'll git home the next day."—Manchester Mirror.

Courting in Cordova.

At night Cordova sleeps early. A few central streets are still busy with people, but the rest are all deserted, the houses look empty, there is an almost oppressive silence. Only here and there as one passes heedlessly along a quiet street one comes suddenly upon a cloaked figure, with a broad brimmed hat, leaning against the bars of a window, and one may catch through the bars a glimpse of a vivid face, dark hair and a rose (an artificial rose) in the hair.

Not in any part of Spain have I seen the traditional Spanish lovmaking, the cloak and hat at the barred window, so frankly and so delightfully on view. It brings a touch of genuine romance which it is almost difficult for those who know comic opera better than the countries in which life is still in its way a serious travesty to take quite seriously. Lovers' faces on each side of the bars of a window at night in a narrow street of white houses—that, after all, and not even the miraculous mosque, may perhaps be the most vivid recollection that one brings away with one from Cordova.—Saturday Review.

Forget the deep plowed furrows in my brow! Forget the silver gleaming in my hair; Look only in my eyes! Oh, darling, there The old love shows no longer than now!

Tie up the broken threads and let us go. Like reunited lovers, hand in hand, Back and yet onward to the sunny land Of our To Be, which was our Long Ago. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox.
